

It was wood, they were almost sure; yet those things in the snow were different from the trees where they had built their dens: they had odd shapes and then, instead of trunks and branches, their surface was smooth and bright. They had formed small paths of paws on the snow. Flying, jumping and climbing, they had scattered themselves on the mysterious objects that, touched, pinched or beaten by the paws uttered a noise. A very nice noise indeed! To be honest!

Since then newspapers and TV had been speaking about that. Children whose anniversary was in December had won: they wouldn't have received only one present for Christmas and birthday! It wasn't their fault if they were born in the month of the small lights and wishes! Looking at the snow around them, it was funny to think when everything was born: the idea was born in Summer while between a bath and a sand castle, they had talked on a very hot sand.... It was there they had read those funny news.
